THE DEAD BABE.

Last night, as my dear babe lay dead, In agony I knelt and said:
"O God! what have I done, Or in what wise offended thee, That thou should'st take away from me My little son?

"Upon the thousand useless lives,
Upon the guilt that vaunting thrives,
Thy wrath were better spent!
Why should'st thou take my little son?
Why should'st thou vent thy wrath upon
This innocent?"

Lest night, as my dear babe lay dead, Before mine eyes that vision spread Of things that might have been— Licentious riot, cruel strife, Forgotten prayers, a wasted life Dark red with sin! Then, with soft music in the air, I saw another vision there—
A shepherd, in whose keep A little lamb—my little child—
Of worldly wisdom undefiled,
Lay fast asleep!

Lest night, as my dear habe lay dead,
In those two messages I read
A wisdom manifest,
And though my arms be childless now
I am content; to him I bow
Who knoweth best.
—Eugene Field in Chicago Record.

ROMANCE OF A "BEAT"

It was Harding, a fine specimen of the hardworking, versatile and traveled newspaper man who cared little for society or for anything but his profession, who told this story to a group of reporters the other night:

"Five years ago I was working on a New York newspaper. One afternoon just as I set out from the office to do my routine assignment the managing his room he glanced up from it and said: "'Harding, I am going to send you to Honduras. You leave in two hours.'-

She extended her hand in frank we come, and I felt unspeakably relieved "He explained that a new uprising Evidently she had not heard the truth was imminent—an uprising that promised to be a bloodier one than any ever and she led me to a small parlor before experienced by that country of constant revolutions. 'I need give you stairs. She was very calm in all he no instruction,' he said. 'You know movements, but I could see that she was what news is. Go there and send it to disturbed. us. Villiers figured in it in a very romantic way. I gave what she had told me as near word for word as I could recall it and described her as the beautiful girl whom many New Yorkers would remember, not as the daughter of a revolutionist, but as a charming woman just out of school. "The next morning I filed it, with a private message to the managing editor that it was to be used only on the eve of the outbreak. "The day after I sent my story I called on her. She was expecting me. Her dress, her manner, betrayed it, and the greeting I received was even more cordial than that of our first meeting.
